SUBLET EMPLOYEES

In the event a Brieser Construction employee is sublet to another contractor, the employee is expected to display the same safety culture demanded by Brieser Construction. Regardless of who the direction is coming from or where they are working, they are representing and working for Brieser Construction.

Employees are expected to perform their duties safely just as if they were directed by a Brieser Superintendent or Job Foreman. If the direction given by the other Contractor is deemed unsafe, you have the authority to not perform that activity until it is safe.

If the contractor the sublet employee is working for does not use a Safe Plan of Action system or a Work Area Review Worksheet, the sublet Brieser employee will be required to fill out these forms daily and turn them in with their weekly time card.

The Brieser Construction Self Audit Checklist shall be used at least once per week to verify compliance of OSHA regulations and good work practices at the work site. This form should also be turned in with their weekly time.

The sublet employee is not allowed to operate any tools or equipment that is presently covered under the Brieser Construction Equipment Training and Safety Manual, unless they have already been trained.
